

FOTO Tips: Review the Patient Response to the Functional Questions

During the intake, the patient responded to the functional questions based on their perception of their functional activities. It is important to understand how the patient perceives their functional abilities. Ask the patient what they were thinking about when they responded to the specific question.

This will give you a better idea what activity is important to the patient, and what you should focus on when you do functional activity training in the clinic.

– Craig

Share this post

Craig Johnson